

Mr. Tim Pippard is a Consultant with the Security and Intelligence Practice of Jane's Strategic Advisory Services (JSAS), the consultancy division of IHS Jane's. In this capacity, he provides defense and intelligence agencies in the U.S., UK, Europe and Asia with security, risk and terrorism analysis, and produces security assessments designed to support the operations of energy sector clients.

Mr. Pippard is a regular speaker at major international defense and security conferences. In April 2009, he delivered a keynote address on jihadist use of the internet at the first ever Public Safety Symposium organized by Microsoft in Redmond, WA. In early May 2009, he spoke on current trends in global terrorism at the U.S. Defense conference in Washington, DC. And in early November 2009, he spoke at the energy Security Council in Houston on the topic of 'jihadist threats to the energy sector'.

Prior to joining JSAS, Mr. Pippard spent nearly four years in various roles with Jane's Security Editorial staff. From December 2006 to June 2008, Mr. Pippard was managing editor of Jane's Terrorism and Insurgency Centre (JTIC), an online terrorism threat assessment resource. During this time, he specialized in analyzing trends in terrorist tactics, techniques and procedures (TTPs) and best practices in the collection, collation and dissemination of open-source intelligence (OSINT). Mr. Pippard has an ongoing relationship with the US National Counterterrorism Center (NCTC), as well as other U.S.-based organisations engaged in the delivery of terrorism OSINT to government and commercial clients, and has participated in the NCTC annual session on terrorism metrics since July 2007.

Prior to joining Jane's in November 2004, Mr. Pippard served as a research associate at the United Nations Association of the UK, where he focused his research on UN peacekeeping strategies and post-conflict reconstruction. He is the co-editor of Human and Environmental Security: An Agenda for Change (Earthscan September 2005), which he launched at the UN General Assembly in New York in 2005, and served as co-editor of the Peacekeeping Digest in International Peacekeeping journal in 2006.

Mr. Pippard holds an MA in International Peace and Security from King's College, University of London, and a BA (Hons) in Comparative American Studies from the University of Warwick.
